TRANSFORMATIVE
This year marked the beginning of a transformational time in the life of the university. Students arrived on campus with a sense of calling and excitement to become well-trained counselors and ministers and the faculty and staff walked alongside them, preparing them to respond to their calling. This high-level of academic preparation and individual care is what makes “the Richmont experience.” Amazingly, while students, faculty, staff, and alumni once again earned incredible academic honors, individuals, families and churches also received help to heal wounded views of self, reconcile meaningful relationships, and restore healthy interdependence.

In many ways, pieces of the Richmont puzzle started to fall into place this year. We graduated the university’s largest class of students, celebrated a 98 percent passing rate on the National Counselor Exam, initiated our second southeastern university partnership, grew enrollment for the incoming School of Counseling class by 30 percent, and provided over 24,000 individuals with counseling services through Richmont’s network of community counseling centers. We are thankful for each of these points of blessing and throughout this report you’ll read about many more. Ultimately, these exciting highlights simply confirm what many of us already knew: that the students, faculty, and alumni at Richmont are incredibly talented and we are blessed beyond measure.

Recently we asked a group of students, faculty, alumni and staff to describe Richmont in one word. People offered words such as: community, authentic, supportive, biblical, academic, well-rounded, stimulating, practical, formative, and missional, to name a few. It is our conviction that as so many unique and meaningful pieces of the university begin to strategically come together, we must begin to measure our progress not on where we have been but against what God himself has called us to do. We continually desire to be obedient to what God says to do when He says to do it. In the midst of launching entirely new academic programs and implementing timely twists on our tried and true programs, Richmont’s mission remains our guiding force: to provide Christ-centered education and research that advances God’s work of healing, restoration, and transformation in the lives of individuals, churches, and communities.

So thank you, for your interest and taking the time to review this annual “perspective.” It is my prayer that through this report you will get glimpse into the heart and mission of Richmont, catch a feel for who we are and what we do, and that you will be inspired to join us.

Joyfully,

Robert G. “Bob” Rodgers

HISTORY

1933
Chattanooga Bible Institute (CBI) is established to support local churches and their various ministries.

1973
Psychological Studies Institute is established to explore the Christian faith and professional counseling.

2000
Psychological Studies Institute and Chattanooga Bible Institute merge together.

2003
Psychological Studies Institute receives accreditation through the Southern Association of College and Schools Commission on Colleges (SACSCOC).

2008
Richmont Graduate University is officially named as a result of the merger.

2012
School of Ministry is officially established with the enrollment of the first cohort.

MISSION STATEMENT
Richmont Graduate University provides Christ-centered education and research that advances God’s work of healing, restoration, and transformation in the lives of individuals, churches, and communities.
GRADUATE DEGREES

Richmont students can pursue master’s degrees in: Professional Counseling, Marriage and Family Therapy, Ministry, and Christian Psychological Studies.

Students also have the option of pursuing a degree specialization in addictions, child and adolescent therapy, sex therapy, spirituality and counseling, and trauma counseling.

Richmont’s curriculum promotes scholarly research and evidence-based methodologies to prepare students to serve individuals of all ethnicities, ages and backgrounds.

COMMUNITY COUNSELING SERVICES

Richmont operates a network of community counseling centers throughout metro Atlanta and Chattanooga to provide mental health services for clients regardless of their insurance status.

Some of our most utilized counseling services include: child and adolescent therapy, Trauma-Focused Cognitive-Behavioral Therapy (TF-CBT), Dialectical Behavior Therapy (DBT), depression/anxiety counseling, grief/loss counseling, marital counseling, Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) counseling, self-esteem/body image counseling, etc. We are proud to boast that we are one of the only providers of reduced-fee, bilingual Parent-Child Interaction Therapy (PCIT).

Currently, Richmont partners with more than 60 agencies throughout the southeast who utilize our interns to offer on-site counseling services to their constituents. Some existing partners include: Atlanta Center for Eating Disorders, Atlanta Mission, CitySide Healthcare, City of Refuge, Devereux Georgia Treatment Network, Good Samaritan Health Center, Peachford Behavioral Health, Ridgeview Institute, Wellspring Living, and more.

The “win-win” in these partnerships is that students get real-world experience, nonprofits avoid the overhead of an in-house mental health clinic, and clients get the help they need.
The School of Counseling at Richmont experienced several exciting new partnerships and programmatic additions while celebrating student accomplishments and achievements in 2013.

In its second year, a total of six courses between 5 p.m. and 10 p.m. were offered on Tuesdays and Thursdays on the Atlanta campus.

Average enrollment was 19 students for non-clinical series courses with a range of 18 to 31 students per class. The clinical series courses, which are limited to 12 students, were full.

In 2014, an assessment of the need for evening courses on the Chattanooga campus will be completed.

Richmont and Emmanuel College entered into a strategic partnership to offer Richmont’s 3+2 program on Emmanuel’s Franklin Springs, GA campus. The 3+2 program now offers Emmanuel students the opportunity to complete their undergraduate and graduate degree in five years.

Since 2011, Richmont has maintained a 3+2 partnership with Bryan College in Dayton, Tennessee.

“\textit{I will instruct you and teach you in the way you should go; I will counsel you with my eye upon you.}”

\textit{PSALM 32:8}
The Lord led me to Richmont through an unlikely series of events. My twenties were spent working in public policy in Washington D.C., where I explored my passion to change the world through legislative advocacy. I loved the fast-paced demands and opportunities of the field, but realized over time that people’s hearts were changed for Christ through relationship, not legislation. I left my career for full-time motherhood and moved to Atlanta. Then, after ten years of marriage my husband and I went through a very devastating season which, for me, was a time of profound brokenness. During this time we experienced first-hand the life-changing impact of faith-based counseling and transformation in both of our lives. Not only was our marriage supernaturally restored, but God also put a calling on my life to minister in this field.

JENNA Riemersma
Master of Arts in Professional Counseling

I count it a privilege to be studying at Richmont. I suppose if I only had one word to describe this university it would be “open” because, from the very beginning, I have felt that Richmont has had a transparency that is unmatched at every other institution. Everyone I have met seems honest and genuine. This authenticity has made me feel free to share my life and ideas with the people around me.

PERSPECTIVES 2013

KELLIE KENT

Master of Arts in Marriage and Family Therapy

Richmont is truly the hidden gem of the South! This university has changed the way I relate to my family, my friends and now my husband. The application of course conversations is seamless in the sense that I have greatly benefited from my studies and my own therapy. My trauma classes have been my favorite and I want to take them over and over again! They are so practical and informative and have informed the way I treat all of my clients.

Sylvain Panu

Master of Arts in Marriage and Family Therapy

At Richmont, I have begun to see how limited the field of counseling can be in regards to men, particularly when considering the natural ways men communicate through side-by-side interactions. There is certainly a place and time for face-to-face conversations, but I am interested in exploring non-threatening, effective ways for men to engage in the counseling process. Since I have studied three forms of martial arts - Silat, Aikido and Taijutsu - I know that friendships and camaraderie are developed while participants exercise, learn something fun, build confidence, and work alongside a partner. I would love to help men become whole, healthy and God-fearing through counseling and martial arts. After graduation, I would even enjoy developing an intervention for families in which each member engages in a martial arts practice so that the family can develop a shared language and engage appropriate physical touch by growing a place and space that is all their own.

POLLY CLARK

Master of Arts in Professional Counseling

I first came to Richmont with a desire to help people in their suffering as a result of many of my own experiences. I had been a rebellious young adult who struggled with depression, an eating disorder and my parent’s divorce. Since then, God has graciously continued to mold me through various trials such as infertility, a difficult marriage and seeking help for my anorexia. Currently, after years of counseling and intervention with our church, I am going through a painful but advised and necessary marital separation. Through all of this, I have found my pain to be a deep portal to the heart of Jesus and my desire to help people is greater than ever.

HERB LEA

Master of Arts in Professional Counseling

For many years I was a church-planting pastor, then a Bible professor in French-speaking Africa and France, and then a middle-school Bible teacher. Although I loved teaching and preaching, I found that these ministries increasingly became pretexts for forming one-on-one mentoring relationships. Similarly, I began to feel increasingly inadequate in dealing with the complicated personal problems people were bringing to me. Combine these things with the true redemption and change I was seeing in my own life through counseling and I wanted to give back a little of what I had received. Everything seemed to come together at Richmont.

Read more about how Herb is pursuing his fourth career and why he is thrilled at the prospect of helping men experience healing by encountering God through meditation and contemplative prayer.
Last year, excitement mingled with great curiosity characterized students in the School of Ministry (SOM) as they wondered how the first year of the new degree program would unfold. As time passed, the stories told by both students and faculty members suggested that what was transpiring was indeed fulfilling the dreams for the program. In many ways, “whole life” changes were taking place throughout the inaugural cohort. Components of academic (head), spiritual (heart), and increased capacities for ministry (hands) were entwined, reinforced and delivered meaningful growth.

HIGHLIGHTS & ACHIEVEMENTS

- The first cohort began their Internship programs titled “Mentored Growth and Development.” With a commitment to work on a weekly basis in a ministry-related site, 100 percent of students secured internship placements in a variety of settings, including churches, faith based ministries, and para-church organizations.
- During the summer, students in the Spiritual Formation degree portion had the opportunity to take a weekend retreat in the beautiful mountains of Northeast Georgia. During this three day retreat, student enjoyed a time of learning, prayer, reflection, and fellowship between the students, professors, and the Lord.
- The School of Ministry’s second cohort of 14 students were enrolled in August 2013.
- Students in the first cohort took it upon themselves to mentor and guide the new students through a big brother/big sister relationship.
- The School of Ministry welcomed nine new adjunct faculty members to the teaching schedule, including a visiting professor from Melbourne, Australia.

“God is being glorified, and the fruits of students’ efforts flow into the hearts of individuals in their communities who are seeking truth, hope, and healing.”

“He has made us competent as ministers of a new covenant—not of the letter but of the Spirit; for the letter kills, but the Spirit gives life.”

2 CORINTHIANS 3:6
Born and raised in north St. Louis, Missouri, and living on my own since the age of 16, I knew that I wanted more than the hand that had been dealt to me. At the age of 22, with nothing but what could fit in my car and a dream of becoming successful, I moved to Atlanta, Georgia. Broken, depressed and alone, I worked two jobs while living in an empty apartment because I could not afford furniture. But, thanks to a pastor speaking into my life, I slowly opened my eyes and began to recognize my own potential.

Working in marketing for 10 years I have enjoyed a good, stable job. Honestly, it took a lot of faith, conversations with my church pastors and family, and a supernatural encounter with the Holy Spirit to get me to apply and then officially sign-on to attend Richmont’s School of Ministry.
After spending two years in an intensive Bible training program for church leaders, I realized I wanted to continue delving deeper into theology, doctrine and effective methods for Bible study. I knew Richmont’s program was exactly what I was looking for, particularly because of the three distinct yet united ministry tracks.

People think you have to be working in ministry to pursue a master’s in ministry and that is just not true. This program helps anyone to develop skills to grow in their own faith, be better leaders, and know and understand more about the Bible. Talking about Christianity doesn’t just apply to church settings. This degree program helps people to have confidence in who they are and in their ability to minister to others.
This year, Richmont’s libraries continued to build resources for the schools of counseling, psychology, and ministry. Special emphasis was placed on enhancing the collection for the Practical Theology portion of the Master of Arts in Ministry.

In addition to monographic resources, a large number of DVD resources were also added to support both ministry and counseling/psychology.

The library also completed the first phase of an in-depth collection analysis. This study took a detailed look at the library collection to ensure proper coverage of the curricular and research needs of the institution. The second phase will take the study to a more detailed level and will be completed in 2014.

That’s a lot of questions!
“One of the reasons I so value the Counseling Center’s partnership with Richmont is the quality of the academic training the university provides to their students. The Richmont interns at my site have been excellently prepared to begin the practical application of what they learned in the classroom. They have received instruction regarding the many different types of clients they may encounter in practice as well as a solid psychological foundation from a Christian perspective. Richmont stands behind their students to ensure they have what they need to begin their counseling ministry.”

Sandra Rawlings
Director of Counseling, Fresh Touch of Healing Counseling Center, Griffin, GA.

“As each has received a gift, use it to serve one another, as good stewards of God’s varied grace.”

Located in Chattanooga, the Richmont Community Counseling (RCCC) provides access to licensed counseling and mental health services for uninsured or underinsured individuals, families and groups. Utilizing highly educated, bilingual and ethnically diverse clinicians and insured interns, the RCCC provides evidence-based treatments at highly subsidized rates.

When combined with paying attendees, approximately 400 individuals were trained during the year.

Individuals served without insurance. Over 50% of these individuals had annual incomes under $15,000
The university operates a network of seven Hope Counseling Centers in the metropolitan Atlanta area. This ministry enables students to hone their clinical skills while providing the community access to high-quality, low-cost counseling from a Christian perspective.

Students continue to offer education to the community as they present topics relevant to mental health and spiritual well-being to churches and agencies throughout the area. They returned to assist with Central United Methodist Church’s effort to address bullying among children and adolescents by presenting at the Anti-Bullying Workshop.

Almost all students have participated in a morning of prayer for the attendees of the business prayer breakfasts offered at Cobb Galleria.
For the Henegar/CBI Counseling Center (H/CBI), providing high-quality care for counselees is core to the mission, and referral sources have broadened. From doctor’s offices and schools to local churches, the H/CBI serves individuals from all over the greater Chattanooga/North Georgia area. This reputation has been built through providing ethical and professional care from a distinctively faith-based perspective. Today, the H/CBI provides services to all ages, and across the spectrum of diagnoses in addition to life transition issues and spiritual problems. These services are available for individuals, couples and families. There are also several groups for varying issues from adolescent struggles to addictions offered at H/CBI.

In 2013, new staff additions included Dr. Ryan Thompson and Jane Neall bringing the number of licensed professionals and therapists to 21.

All of the doctoral level therapists also served as clinical faculty, teaching a wide array of classes at Richmont and exposing students to a diversity of perspectives.

Additionally, the H/CBI team successfully navigated a very positive transition in leadership as Dr. Tim Sisemore shifted to directing and enhancing Richmont Graduate University’s research efforts full-time and Dr. Jeff Eckert assumed the directorship of the Henegar/CBI Counseling Center.

“Overall, 2013 saw growth in the H/CBI staff and range and breadth of services, all while the staff provided numerous hours of public services through consultation and speaking to a wide range of lay and professional groups. The Lord has used each counselor to enter into the pain of countless lives in a humbling fashion. We pray that the Lord uses H/CBI in the coming year in mighty ways to bring healing to lives in Chattanooga and the surrounding areas.”

Jeff Eckert
The Board of Trustees at Richmont Graduate University awarded trustee emeritus and friend of the university, Hugh Dayton Huffaker, Jr., with an honorary doctorate on July 17, 2013 in Chattanooga, Tennessee.

“Hugh is a remarkable person and has selflessly served the university by investing his time, expertise and treasure for many decades,” said Rodgers. “Awarding Hugh with an honorary doctorate is an honor well deserved as he has devotedly served and stewarded this institution with integrity in ways that continue today.”

Huffaker’s service to Richmont began in 1976 - years before the Chattanooga Bible Institute (CBI) merged with the Psychological Studies Institute (PSI) to create today’s accredited university. Serving through various campaigns - capital (1982), building (1989), and endowment (1993) - the CBI and PSI merger (2000), and the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Colleges (SACSCOC) accreditation process (2003), Huffaker has been a steadfast voice for Christian counselor education. In addition to serving Richmont, Huffaker has also served the greater Chattanooga community through his involvement via the Chattanooga Association of Realtors, McCallie School, the CARTA transportation board, Huffaker Real Estate, Bryan College, the Electric Power Board, and many more.

“Hugh is the surviving link between Richmont and the CBI founder, the late Dr. James Fowle. Dr. Fowle recruited Hugh to the CBI board in 1976,” said Henegar. “Hugh could have honorably retired after numerous achievements in the CBI/PSI story - the joint venture, the merger, the purchase of the Central Presbyterian property, and SACSCOC accreditation, for example. He also could have retired after reaching age 65, age 70, age 75, age 80. But he was steadfast, and his work for CBI/PSI/Richmont abounded in strong results.”

This fall, Richmont hosted several development evenings in the homes of current donors and friends of the university. These intimate gatherings offered one-on-one contact as a means of sharing the mission and vision of Richmont Graduate University. They also provided a creative avenue for the “Richmont story” to be better known throughout the Southeast.

George Dempsey, a current Master of Arts in Ministry student, hosted one of these events in his home. Reflecting on the evening George said, “Serving as a host family for ‘An Evening at Richmont’ was quite a blessing. Months of prayers and planning went into the preparation for this event. The Richmont Advancement Department and the School of Ministry students played a key role in the success of the evening. The vast majority of attendees were experiencing the vision and mission of Richmont for the first time. The response from the evening has been overwhelmingly positive. Not only were we able to engage over forty people with the story of Richmont, a large number of people who attended the event made sizable donations to the University. All praise, honor, and glory to God the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit for the great things He has done.”
IN MEMORY

JUDY STONE

1935 - 2013
Richmont Board Member

Judith Finley Stone, 78, of Chattanooga, Tennessee passed away on December 2, 2013, after a brief illness. She was the President of the GPS class of 1954 and attended Vanderbilt University before graduating from the University of Tennessee in 1980 with a B.S. in Accounting. She was employed as a CPA with Joseph Decosimo & Company, working as a tax manager and specializing in the taxation of estates and trusts. She was also employed by Spears, Moore, Rebman & Company prior to retiring in 1995.

Judy was a caring and passionate member of her community and supported many philanthropic causes. She has an especially passionate interest in education. Elected as a trustee of the University of Chattanooga Foundation in 1995, Judy served as treasurer beginning in 2007. She sat on the executive committee and chaired the nominating committee beginning in 2009 and continued to serve until her death. Additionally, Judy served on the finance committee and endowment committee of the Girls’ Preparatory School. Giving the best of herself to many people and organizations, Judy also faithfully served the following organizations: Rivermont Presbyterian Church, King College, the Faith and Hope Fund for the Presbytery of East Tennessee, Bachman Academy, University of Tennessee Alliance of Women Philanthropists, the Kidney Foundation, Scenic Land School, Tennessee River Gorge Trust, and the UTC College of Business Advisory Board. She also enjoyed attending several Bible studies, book clubs, and participating in the Women of Rivermont club.

A Richmont board member since 2010, Judy faithfully provided valuable insights, stability and consistency. She was extremely influential in helping the university’s board navigate challenging conversations and decisions and she always pointed the group back to Christ. Earlier in 2013, Judy also generously gave a $150,000+ gift to the university which was the largest gift given by an individual to the university this year. She was a constant source of encouragement and her input, time and leadership on our board was invaluable. She will forever be remembered for her love of family, enjoyment of travel, appreciation for photography, gentle heart, quick wit, and extraordinarily generous spirit. The entire Richmont community honors her life and will miss her greatly.

The daughter of the late W. Max Finley and Margaret Ferrell Finley, Judy was also mother to William M. Stone III of Knoxville, Catherine Dianne Stone of Nashville, and Robert Finley Stone of Chattanooga. Judy’s family has left an indelible legacy at Richmont Graduate University through their gifts of time, talent and treasure.

Richmont Graduate University ended the 2012-2013 fiscal year in healthy financial standing. The university is especially proud of having no long-term debt, a track record of collecting on receivables in a timely manner, sustaining greater assets than liabilities, maintaining a restricted endowment in support of student scholarships, and pursuing a significant level of independent charitable contributions.

Each year, the university also conducts annual audits that are in compliance with Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP). Additionally, Richmont pursues independent audits of our government student loan program. These efforts are also in compliance with all Government Auditing Standards.

As a whole, the faculty, staff and students of Richmont Graduate University are grateful for every partner who financially invests in the university’s mission and vision to provide Christ-centered education and research that advances God’s work of healing, restoration, and transformation in the lives of individuals, churches, and communities.
